Title	Why does AJ have to involve Mary in his teachings?

Question

Forgive me for being so bold but as far as your soul mate is concerned she is not comfortable teaching your truth from the stand point of her having to confess she recalls being your soul mate and so forth. But she is very comfortable in getting your teachings out in the same manner as anyone else would that your teachings have helped!

Ask yourself are you trying to control and or convince her because of your own fears, which is incorrect on your part. Is this perhaps one of the reasons why no entries have been added on your website since Jan of 2010? It is very hard on a person who is sincere to live a lie let alone teach it, and anyone who is sensitive picks up on this easily! So whether she is or isn't your eternal soul mate she certainly is in the present, and should be treated with such due respect and appreciated for who she really is at present!

This no doubt has created a problem for her and those you both are teaching! There is something here that is not right and can be felt by most if not all and should be looked at again. Only a suggestion from one who really knows nothing about either one of you, except I believe your teachings on emotions for the healing of the soul and body are true - they work and cannot be questioned.

Why not leave Mary out of it, are you pushing her and not allowing her to be herself, 'who she is at present', a helper spreading the real teachings that will benefit those who are sincere if that is her decision to do so without having to say she was your mate in another life time? She does not recall these things that you keep pushing at her and it shows in her vibrations and speech.

You actually come off or appear as a control freak when it comes to her, as if your going to cave in and fall apart if she is not there, can you not see this? This is something (emotions) you need to look at in yourself! It's like you don't experience the healings of your own teachings, causing others to wonder why it doesn't work for you? She might be interested in different areas having nothing to do with your teachings and if so allow her to grow in her choices, she is not here to re-live another life but the one she presently has, is this not true?

Mary's Answer

Hi S____,

Firstly in answer to your question in the subject header of your email 'is this website continuing?' - currently AJ & myself are taking a break from scheduled talks and workshops for a period of 3-6 months (commencing September 2010). You will find that there are a large number of Mp3 downloads on the site after Jan 2010 should you be interested in listening to more talks.

Secondly I think this is a wonderful opportunity to express myself to you as you see it is me, Mary, AJ's soulmate who deals with the enquiry inbox from our website.

In your email you have asserted that AJ 'pushes' me, and that he is a 'control freak' and that he insists that others believe he is Jesus, these things are not facts. I merely wish to state that as truth. Of course there is much evidence that your assertions are very untrue should you care to make further investigations but that I feel is entirely up to you. You are perfectly free to maintain your false perceptions of both us.

You also say "as far as your soul mate is concerned she is not comfortable teaching your truth from the stand point of her having to confess she recalls being your soul mate " - this is true, for a long time, largely due to the rejection of my family and their fears I was very uncomfortable with discussing the memories that I do have regarding our first century life together. The fear and reluctance I have had are due not to my lack of conviction of who I am but rather my fear and grief at being questioned, ridiculed and rejected as a result of speaking out about my feelings and knowledge. This is the treatment I received from my family members when I first began having memories. To openly speak out about God's Truth of the Universe and practice Truth and Love causes many people to be challenged and angry. I have many memories of being harmed and my husband being killed as a result of such a life in the first century so naturally this only added to my terror about speaking to others and very often I would be angry or reluctant with AJ - not because of his pressure but because of the fears of being harmed and ridiculed that I was unwilling to deal with.

Ironically there also is a large amount of scrutiny and criticism inherent in your email. The very things that I used to find so terrifying and painful. Thankfully I have made inroads into dealing with these emotions and I feel much more confident about valuing and speaking Truth above my fears. I would be lying to say that I am no longer afraid however I am much more willing to process these feelings. I desire very much to stay connected to my mate, AJ, and so I am more aware of when I try to control him through my fears. Had you attended a more recent talk or workshop you would have encountered a much more expressive and excited me! I am very passionate about teaching this Truth and have on occasions begun to do so in workshops and talks independent of AJ.

You feel that you know and understand me and my character from listening to or watching various public seminars, never having met me in person - I pose to you that this is hardly the way to know a person. Especially since you are unaware of or are dismissing the large amount of personal fears I have about my and AJ' safety and the grief at the loss of family that I have been dealing with over the past three years.

Thank-you for this opportunity to add clarity to how I actually feel, and to assure you that I am Mary Magdelene of the first century, who remembers Yeshua, her soulmate and our life together. It has often been hard for me to realize how my previous emotions and resistance have effected many who listen to the talks - however I hope that one day this will also be a way of teaching others - to see how much I have changed, how I have worked through so many fears and how that effects me in all areas of my life.

Much love to you
Mary

Frequently Asked Questions

Jesus' Answer

Hello there S_____

I certainly agree with you that at the time of writing this, Mary is certainly uncomfortable discussing her identity in public, just as she is uncomfortable talking about many subjects relating to her personal experience. I find it very interesting that you believe this discomfort in public is really about me forcing Mary to do things she does not want to do, rather than looking at what Mary herself has said, in public, are the reasons for her discomfort! It seems to me that you are not listening to Mary, and listening to her own public comments about the reasons for her own discomfort.

I do not force Mary to do anything. Your belief that I do is more about your own personal emotional experiences with the men in your life rather than about my relationship with Mary. In fact, as Mary will admit, she often attempts to force me to do things to suit her own fears. This occurs both in private and in public. I always encourage Mary to only do what she desires, and to NEVER do what she believes I want, unless she herself passionately wants to do it. If you ever have a private conversation with Mary, without me present, you will find that she does not feel I attempt to control her in any way. If I notice that she seems to be doing something only to please me, then I ask Mary to not do it at all, and, rather, to feel about why she has that feeling.

I also cannot make someone believe they are my soul mate. For a person to be my soul mate, they will have to have memories of the last 2000 years of their life, memories which will be independent of my own memories, but which will fit into my memories when our experience is of the same events. In addition, she will have her own memories of before she met me, and she will have her own emotions about that experience. It is especially impossible to convince someone they are Mary Magdalene when they themselves do not want to be. Mary definitely has had emotions about NOT wanting to be Mary Magdalene, but her emotions and memories are telling her a different story, and so she is reluctantly beginning to accept her own experience.

When we first met, Mary asked me to never mention anything about my memories about our life together in the spirit world, on earth in the 1st century, or my memories about Mary Magdalene, and I have honoured that request. All of Mary's memories have arrived at a great shock to herself personally (since she did not initially believe she would have any memories). In addition, when Mary first met me, Mary arrogantly believed that she would be able to convince me that I am not Jesus, not understanding that my memories tell me who I am. So in fact, Mary expected that she would not only be able to convince me that I am not Jesus, but she actively attempted to do so. But in the end, she ended up having her own emotions and memories about her identity.

That all being said, Mary does have many fears, which she has expressed to you above, about talking in public about her own personal experiences and identity. She has experienced many people like yourself criticising her, which she finds difficult to handle at times, and is especially afraid of her family and the attack she has already experienced from her family and friends. She also always feels like she is getting judged (just as you are currently judging her), and this makes her feel very reticent about being open and frank about her memories and experiences.

Since I have already had to deal with large amounts of judgements, like your own judgement of me, and I have already worked through many of my fears, I am far more open about my experiences than Mary presently is. However, Mary has already filled up books, in private, or her memories and experiences, which she currently still desires to remain private.

Frequently Asked Questions

Your own judgements of me are really your own judgements of men generally, and, you expect me to be the same as the other men in your life, which I am not. Also, you neither know Mary nor myself, and so, it is impossible for you to see how our relationship is on a day to day basis just from watching a few video presentations.

When I am presenting material publicly, I am very conscious of presenting the Truth, and when Mary's fear prevents the presentation of Truth in a public setting, then I will also correct her in a public setting, just as I expect her to do the same with myself.

As Mary deals with her fears, you will find her far more open out her own life, her own memories and her own emotional experience. I am very proud of my soul mate, and, I know for certain that she is pivotal in teaching the Divine Truth about true femininity on earth, but this can only happen as she works through her own emotions, experience, and regains her own relationship with God, which she is doing.

Mary is currently demonstrating to you what true humility is, being open about all of her own emotions and experiences in a public setting. To do this in front of the world, which Mary is doing, requires huge amounts of courage and bravery, which my soul mate has plenty of. One day you will understand that your own criticisms of her and myself are not only unfounded, but also a reflection of your own unhealed inter-gender emotional injuries, and your own inability to see the Truth surrounding other peoples emotional condition, because of yet being sensitive to your own unloving emotions.
