Answer

(Laughs) The question of followers: well, if you are asking if there are people who follow the teachings I teach, or attempt to follow the teachings I teach, then I'm sure there are. I don't know how many there are because I don't know how many people are attempting to follow the things that I teach. So, my feelings are – I don't keep track of anybody who listens to the Divine Truth – people can come along to the seminars, and come along to our website, listen to anything that we present in any of those forums and we're not interested in how many people are listening, we're not interested in what those people are doing in their personal lives. Obviously we just would like to share the Divine Truth with people in the world, and if lots and lots of people enjoy listening to the truth, then that's what we're attempting to do – hopefully give them the Truth that they can listen to and personally apply in their lives.

We feel that a lot of people do attempt to apply the Truth in their lives, but there are also a lot of people who come along to our seminars and I've seen them come along to our seminars for four years and I haven't really seen them change very much at all in that time. So I would assume that they are not applying the particular Truths that I'm teaching in their personal lives but Mary and I have very little to do in our day-to-day life with people who say they are following the Divine Truth material. I don't feel that anyone follows me: in fact, I don't want people to follow me in the sense of me telling them what to do, and then they do what I say.

I would like people to follow my example: if everyone in the world followed my example, I feel that we would have a very peaceful world, and we would also have some very happy people living in the world as well. So, in regard to the question of followers, I would love to have people follow my example, I would love to have people listen to the Divine Truth and follow the material in the sense of personally applying the material in their personal lives, and develop a personal relationship with God.

I definitely do not want people to listen to my words and follow my words without them having some kind of emotional, and feeling based, experience with God themselves. I would prefer to see that they have a personal experience with God, and then they work their way through the issues with God and with their neighbour, in terms of regard to the issues of a lack of love in their lives, and then they practice those particular things surrounding love. That's what I would like them to do.
