Answer

Well since God is infinite and since it makes sense that the Universe potentially has a potential for infinite growth, we can logically assume that Divine Truth itself, in other words all of God's Truth, is infinite in its nature. In other words, we will never find out everything that God has done.

In fact it's interesting because some holy books on the planet actually say that; for example the Bible in Ecclesiastics says that you will never find out everything that God has done, no matter how long you live and no matter how long you investigate truth, you'll never find out everything. And that is a quality of Divine Truth and it's logical – if you think about it – to assume that this is the case.

That being the case, no finite thing can contain something that's infinite and that means that things like the Bible and other holy books such as the Quran, do not contain the full amount of God's Truth; it is impossible for them to contain such. So this quality means that it's impossible for us to contain an infinite amount of Divine Truth in a finite system. And we, humankind, create finite systems, so when we write a book it has a start and an end, and it might have a few thousand pages in between, but sooner or later it gets too big for us to manage generally, and so we finalise the book and have a finite system.

But God's Truth is infinite, so there's no way logically that an infinite truth can fit into a finite system. The only way in fact that truth can fit into us is by our soul growing towards the infinite. And the only way our soul can grow towards the infinite is by our absorption of Divine Love and that causes our soul to grow infinitely beyond its original capacity. And that then allows that particular soul, who has chosen to grow with Divine Love, to start absorbing more and more of the infinite truth.

So really in the end the only book or word of God that will be contained on the planet will be the word as written in those people who receive Divine Love to the point where they've grown beyond the normal capacity of a human to absorb it. And that's the only way that we can become the Word of God.

Mary: So just to clarify, you're saying that God's Truth is infinite in its nature and so it can never be contained in a finite thing like a book. And you're saying that we ourselves have the potential to grow infinitely?

Towards the infinite, of course we'll never become God because God by definition is probably also continuously expanding. We don't know that of course because it's hard for the creation to know what created it, right down to the infinite detail, but we do know that we grow beyond our original human capacity if we receive Divine Love, which is from the infinite source. So as long as we do that, we have the capacity to receive more and more Divine Truth; we have the capacity to understand more and more of it. But we will never know it all, ever.

That is the quality of Divine Truth; you are never going to know it all. So give up the whole concept of trying to know it all, and also stop listening to anybody who tells you they know it all, because they don't! (Laughs)

Mary: Sure, great, thank you.
